School Visits With The Next Generation Of Workers

Last month Divall's attended both Mulwaree and Goulburn High Schools to speak to students about the career paths and opportunities available in the construction, earthmoving & haulage industries.

Taking the time to discuss key skills students will need when applying for any job and the attributes employers will be looking for in potential new staff, this initiative follows the need identified by businesses in the local community for better fostering of the employability skills held by the next generation of workers.

For each visit we took one of our operators in a similar age group to the students with whom we were speaking - this gave the students the opportunity to ask someone in their own demographic their opinion and advice.

These visits give the students a chance to hear about the industry, & gives business the ability to gain crucial connections with local students who in the next 1-3 years will be looking to enter the workforce.
