2012 NATROAD AWARDS

The 2012 NatRoad Awards, which recognise excellence in the road transport industry, were presented on the 3rd of August, at the Annual NatRoad Conference in Queensland.

The Road Transport Industry is vital to the Australian economy and lifestyles, and is the dominant mode of transport for the consumables that every day Australians need and enjoy on a daily basis, and the materials and products that industry depends on.

These awards recognise the efforts of individuals, whose commitment to the transport industry warrant special attention.

The new category of award, "Excellence in Operational Support" (operations of eight or more trucks), was presented to Troy Cook, Transport Manager with Divall's Earthmoving and Bulk Haulage. A presenter at the Australian Trucking Convention earlier this year, he was instrumental in Divall's win of the 2011 John Kelly TruckSafe Award.

Troy and his off sider, Kerry Sheehan, allocate & manage the day to day running of a fleet of 28 trucks and their drivers.

Our regular customers will be aware of the motorbike accident, 12 months ago, that left Troy restricted to a wheel chair. For those people who continually make enquiries as to his progress, we can happily say that he is making incredible advancements with his rehabilitation and his determination and grit are still an inspiration to us all.

L-R: NatRoad President Geoff Crouch, Professional Driver of the Year Phillip Southwell, Excellence in Operational Support winner Troy Cook, Ken Stehbens of Lindsay Transport and Owen Driscoll of NTI.
